STRENGTH OF THE CZAR.

The Rochester Democrat and Chronide says that Christian Petersen, a Dane, now living at Wolcott, N. Y., was until recently a member of the King of Denmark's body guard. Petersen is a young fellow about 25 years of age, and is a splendid specimen of physical manhood.

Early this summer the Czar of Russia, the Prince of Wales and other high mightinesses came to spend the sum-mer with the King of Denmark. It tell to Petersen's lot to be detailed on the Czar's guard, and they escorted that imperial personage wherever he went. In May it became his whim to go fishing daily each afternoon on a small lake near the royal castle. The Czar asked the officer in charge of the guard to select a competent oarsman to row him about. In response to the latter's question as to who among the men un-derstood the management of a boat, six soldiers stepped from the ranks. The Czar looked them over and selected Petersen. Thereafter, for about a fort-night, his only duty was to man a boat from 3 to 5 p. m., each day and row the Czar about. The latter, Petersen says, caught very few fish, being too nervous to become an expert angler. Yet it could not have been through fear of nihilists or other evil-disposed persons, for whenever he was afloat the lake was surrounded by 10,000 soldiers, who spread out in a thin line clear around the sheet, allowing no outsider even to approach the shore. Petersen describes the Czar as a huge, handsome man, very pleasant to all who come in contact with him, and of prodigious strength. He weighs nearly 300 pounds, is 6 feet 4 inches tall nearly 300 pounds, is 6 feet 4 inches tall and without an ounce of superfluous fat. On one occasion this spring he gave a public exhibition of his enormous strength. He was complaining of the quality of metal a certain contractor had supplied for the bayonets used in his army, when the captain of the guard ventured to suggest that the guard ventured to suggest that the sword bayonet used by his men was of the finest quality of Norwegian wager you 50 francs that you have been cheated like the rest of us."

"I will take that wager," said the officer, with a satisfied smile. In an instant the Czar called one of the soldiers to him, and, removing the bayonet from the latter's gun, took it between the thumb and fingers of either hand. Then, standing erect, and apparently with scarcely an effort, he broke the tough steel in two pieces.

Petersen explained that this was merely a whimsical exhibition of great strength, and no reflection on the quality of the metal, which could not be surpassed. But the soldiers of the garrison subsequently tried to emulate the feat, selecting some of their strongest men for the trial, but were unable to break the bayonets.

LOCAL VS. CITY TRADE.-Many merchants in towns and villages feel very burner, but a much chagrined and disappointed when they see their fellow townsmen sending daily to "the city" for dry goods, books, etc., instead of patronizing the men who are the mainstay of table to see a conscientious, upright merchant in a small town doing his best to give the people in his merchant in a small town doing his best gives 60 canchance to inspect a full range of the season's novelties, and when they have fully inspected his stock, got a general idea of what they ought to buy, they send for samples from "the city," and maintain that the people of a town are following their own interests when they patronize their home trade. Every store in a town pays a certain amount of rent, taxes, gas bills, etc., and the wages of employer and employee will amount to a snug sum every year. Another store occupied increases the price of real estate. Another store and one or two houses occupied means less taxes on other property. Another store occupied and competing for trade means an increased number of visitors, rural and civic, and an increased circulation of money in this and a dozen dif-

backbone. Take them out of any town and in three months it will be as dead as the proverbial "door nail." They are the sap of the town, and give it activity and life. One live merchant is worth ninety-nine retired farmers. Merchants talk up the town; they draw manufacturers into it; they draw residents; they invest money in it; they help it in a thousand ways.—Dry Goods Review, Toronto and Montreal.
